

The LASD notified the deputies of the proposed policy. The Association for Los Angeles County Deputy Sheriffs (“ALADS”), a union representing non-supervisory deputies, opposed the policy. ALADS filed a lawsuit seeking an injunction to, among other things, prohibit the LASD from creating its Brady list or disclosing it (or individual names off of it) to anyone outside of the LASD, absent full compliance with the Pitchess procedure. The case made its way up to the California Supreme Court.

In a unanimous decision in favor of the LASD, the Court first evaluated the extent to which California’s SB 1421, effective January 1, 2019, affected its analysis. That new law, which went into effect while this case was pending, opened for public inspection many types of peace officers personnel records that could cause an officer to be on a Brady list, such as: particular categories of sustained findings of officer dishonesty, perjury, false statements, filing false reports, or evidence destruction, falsification, or concealment. The Court found that although some of this SB 1421 information could place an officer on a Brady list, other types of misconduct and information might also do so.

To resolve the case, the Court held that the “confidentiality” requirement of the Pitchess statutes should be interpreted to allow law enforcement agencies to comply with their constitutional obligations under Brady by providing limited Brady alerts to prosecutors. A Brady alert is limited to informing prosecutors that a potential peace officer witness in a particular case is on the Brady list. The Court reasoned:

In common usage, confidentiality is not limited to complete anonymity or secrecy...[D]eeming information “confidential” creates insiders (with whom information may be shared) and outsiders (with whom sharing information might be an impermissible disclosure). The text of the Pitchess statutes does not clearly indicate that prosecutors are outsiders, forbidden from receiving confidential Brady alerts.

The Court concluded that “the Department may provide prosecutors with the Brady alerts at issue here without violating confidentiality.”

It is important to note that the Court did not hold that LASD could forward an entire Brady list to prosecutors. Rather, the Court held that Brady alerts were permissible on a case-by-case basis, that is only when there was a pending criminal case.

Association for Los Angeles Deputy Sheriffs v. Superior Court (Los Angeles County Sheriff’s Department), No. S243855 (August 26, 2019)

NOTE:

This decision will allow law enforcement and criminal prosecutorial agencies to more efficiently work together without compromising an officer’s privacy rights. LCW celebrates its attorneys and staff for serving the Sheriff’s Department so well throughout this case.

LABOR RELATIONS

County Violated MMBA By Unilaterally Amending Rules Regarding Promotional Opportunities.

The County of Orange revised its Merit Selection Rules (“MSR”) for employee promotions and renamed them its Recruitment Rules and Policies (“RRP”). The Association of Orange County Deputy Sheriffs (“Association”) later learned of the revisions. The Association sent the County a letter identifying several changes it considered to be subject to bargaining, and requested the County to return to the status quo by reinstating the former MSR. The County declined, and replied that none of the changes concerned mandatory subjects of bargaining. The Association then filed an Unfair Practice Charge (“UPC”) with PERB based on the following changes.

First, the RRP amended the MSR’s “Qualification of Applicants” section to state that applicants must not only meet “minimum qualifications” to be considered for a position, but depending on the needs of the County, applicants must also have “desirable qualifications.” Second, the RRP amended the MSR’s “Assessment Requirements” section to require “desirable or ideal qualifications” in some circumstances addition to minimum qualifications. Third, the RRP included new language limiting applicants for inter-jurisdictional transfers from other counties. Fourth, the RRP employed a new “absent rater formula” to recuse a panel member in case of a “close personal relationship” with a candidate.

The ALJ ruled that the County’s actions did not violate the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act (“MMBA”) because these changes fell outside the scope of representation, and thus did not require advance notice to the Association or an opportunity to meet and confer. Applying the three-part test regarding the scope of representation, the ALJ referenced City of Alhambra (2010) PERB Decision No. 2139-M (Alhambra), which held that some changes to procedures for promotional opportunities are outside the scope of representation. The ALJ then concluded that based on Alhambra, the changes to threshold qualification levels in the RRP were outside the scope of representation.

As for the “absent rater formula” and inter-jurisdictional transfers, the ALJ found that these changes both had an effect on public services and were a fundamental managerial or policy decision, and therefore fell outside the scope of representation. The Association excepted to the ALJ's ruling, and the matter was heard before the PERB Board.

PERB reversed the ALJ's decision. PERB found that the County violated the MMBA by implementing changes to the MSR/RRP without affording the Association advance notice and an opportunity to bargain. PERB held that because the revisions at issue were substantive changes to the County's promotional procedures, they fell within the scope of representation.

PERB examined 35 years of precedent predating the Alhambra decision which supported that promotional opportunities usually fall within the scope of representation. PERB stated that promotional opportunities fall outside the scope of representation only under unusual circumstances, such as when an employer makes no substantive changes to a procedure, or revises a procedure to comply with changes in the law.

PERB found no such unusual circumstances in this case. PERB found that the County's implementation of "desired" qualifications excluded candidates who met the minimum qualifications, and therefore implicated the promotional opportunities of those who did not. The County's new rating formula also altered promotional opportunities. PERB decided that the County's desire for a uniform recruitment policy covering all departments did not create an unusual circumstance that released the County from its duty to bargain. PERB found that promotional criteria were within the scope of representation and disavowed Alhambra on this issue.

PERB also found that the County violated the MMBA with regard to effects bargaining. PERB disagreed with the ALJ's conclusion that the Association failed to state a claim for effects bargaining because it did not demand effects bargaining after it learned of the unilateral implementation. PERB ruled that if a union learns of an agency's decision after its unilateral implementation, there can be no waiver its right to bargain effects for failure to make a demand because a union's obligation to demand effects bargaining never even arises in the face of an employer's unilateral implementation. PERB also found the effects identified by the Association, including job security and promotional opportunities were not speculative given the substance of the unilaterally imposed changes.

County of Orange, PERB Decision No. 2663-M (2019).

NOTE:

This PERB decision disparages a nine-year old PERB precedent and overturns the ALJ's decision that was in the employer's favor. LCW will continue to monitor PERB decisions and report on whether this decision is part of any trend.

DISCRIMINATION

Employee Must Show An Adverse Employment Action Would Not Have Occurred But For A Disability.

Dr. Michael Murray sued the Mayo Clinic ("Clinic") and various individuals alleging disability discrimination in violation of the federal Americans With Disabilities Act ("ADA") after the Clinic terminated his employment. During trial, Dr. Murray requested that the district court instruct the jury that he would prevail if he established that his disability "was a motivating factor" in the Clinic's decision to terminate his employment. The district court denied Dr. Murray's request and instead instructed the jury that Dr. Murray needed to establish that he "was discharged because of his disability." This is known as the "but for" causation standard. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendants. Dr. Murray appealed.

On appeal, Dr. Murray argued that the district court was required to instruct the jury on the "motivating factor" standard rather than the "but for" standard based on the Ninth Circuit precedent stated in the case Head v. Glacier Northwest, Inc., 413 F.3d 1053 (9th Cir. 2005.) However, a three-judge panel of Ninth Circuit disagreed.

The court noted that while the Ninth Circuit's decision in Head had been consistent with the plain meaning of the ADA and the interpretation of other courts, the U.S. Supreme Court ("USSC") had subsequently issued decisions to change the applicable causation standard. For example, the USSC held that an employee must "prove that age was the 'but-for' cause of the employer's adverse action" in order to prevail on a claim under the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act in Gross v. FBL Financial Services Inc., 557 U.S. 167 (2009). The USSC declined to extend the "motivating factor" causation standard to Title VII retaliation claims in University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center v. Nassar, 570 U.S. 338 (2013). Accordingly, the court noted that the USSC has retreated from the "motivating factor" causation standard.

The court noted that while a three-judge panel generally cannot overrule a prior Ninth Circuit decision, it may overrule prior authority when an intervening USSC case undermines the existing precedent. The court concluded that because the USSC's decisions in Gross and Nassar were clearly irreconcilable with the Ninth Circuit's decision in Head, Head was overruled. Thus, the court found that an employee bringing a discrimination claim under the ADA must show that the adverse employment action would not have occurred but for the disability.

Murray v. Mayo Clinic (2019) 2019 WL 3939627.

NOTE:

This case confirms that California courts should apply the "but for" causation standard when considering ADA discrimination cases. This standard is more generous towards employers than the "motivating factor" causation standard.

Employee Could Not Establish Disability Discrimination Without A Causal Relationship Between His Impairment And Termination.

Jose Valtierra began working for Medtronic, Inc. in 2004 as a facility maintenance technician. Between his hiring until his termination in 2014, Valtierra was severely overweight. In late 2013, Valtierra received time off for joint pain associated with his weight. Valtierra returned to work in December 2013 without medical restrictions; however, he was still morbidly obese.

In May 2014, Valtierra's supervisor noticed Valtierra seemed to be having difficulty walking. Concerned about Valtierra's ability to perform his job, the supervisor checked the computer system the company used to track assignments. Although Valtierra had left for vacation a day prior, the computer system indicated that he had completed numerous assignments that should have taken a more significant amount of time to complete. When Valtierra's supervisor confronted him about these discrepancies, Valtierra admitted he had not performed all of the work, but intended to complete the assignments when he returned from vacation. Medtronic then terminated Valtierra for falsifying records.

Subsequently, Valtierra sued Medtronic alleging that he had a disability within the meaning of the Americans with Disabilities Act ("ADA") and that his termination was unlawful discrimination. The trial court dismissed Valtierra's case, finding that obesity, no matter how great, could not constitute a disability under ADA regulations unless the obesity is caused by an underlying condition. The trial court concluded that Valtierra was not able to demonstrate that his obesity was caused by such a condition.

On appeal, the Ninth Circuit affirmed the trial court's decision to dismiss the case. However, the Ninth Circuit did not decide whether Valtierra's obesity was a disability under the ADA. Instead, the court found that even assuming that Valtierra was disabled, he could not establish ADA disability discrimination because he could not prove a causal relationship between his obesity and his termination. The court reasoned that because Valtierra admitted he marked assignments as completed when he had not done the work, and because he had been severely overweight throughout his employment, there was no basis to conclude that the company terminated him for any reason other than falsifying records.

Valtierra v. Medtronic Inc. (2019) 2019 WL 3917531.

NOTE:

Agencies should also be aware that obesity may be a disability within the meaning of the California Fair Employment and Housing Act ("FEHA") if there is a physiological cause or if the employer perceives of or regards the condition as a disability. Accordingly, public agencies should be sure to carefully evaluate all disability discrimination complaints and requests for accommodation involving obesity.

PUBLIC RECORDS

County Lawfully Increased Its Fee For Copies Of Records.

In 2010, Alameda County adopted an ordinance increasing the fee for copies of records from $1.50 per page to $3.50 per page. The County adopted this ordinance in response to studies it conducted in 2009 and 2010. The 2009 fee study revealed it cost the County $3.60 in direct and indirect costs to copy one page of a County record. The second fee study in 2010 revealed it cost $4.08 to copy one page of a record. That study attributed the increased cost to an increase in salary and benefits in the intervening year. The County also evaluated the fees of neighboring counties and found their fees ranged from $1.00 per page to $7.00 per page.

In 2014, California Public Records Research, Inc. ("CPRR") challenged the County's ordinance increasing the fee to $3.50 per page based on Government Code section 27366. Government Code section 27366 provides that the fee "shall be set . . . in an amount necessary to recover the direct and indirect costs of providing the product or service." CPRR argued that the County violated section 27366. After the trial court found that the County's fee of $3.50 per page was "unlawful under [section] 27366 as arbitrary, capricious, or entirely lacking evidentiary support," the County appealed.

On appeal, the County contended that it “did not abuse its discretion by enacting a fee schedule encompassing indirect costs authorized by Government Code section 27366.” The California Court of Appeal agreed. The court noted that the case hinged on what the Legislature meant by “indirect costs” in section 27366. The court relied on the statute’s legislative history and determined that the Legislature intended to give county boards of supervisors the flexibility and discretion to consider a wide range of indirect costs. Therefore, the court concluded that CPRR could not establish that the County had violated section 27366.

Further, the Court of Appeal determined that the County’s fee schedule was not “arbitrary, capricious, or entirely lacking evidentiary support” as the trial court had found. CPRR alleged that the $52.50 cost for a typical 15-page deed of trust demonstrated the “excessiveness” of the County’s $3.50 per page fee. However, the court reasoned that CPRR provided no evidence about the average length of copy requests, or the reasonableness of charging fees based on a flat rate per page. The court also noted that even though the County’s 2010 fee study found it cost $4.08 per page to make copies of official records, it still adopted a fee of $3.50 per page. Therefore, the court concluded that it must defer to the County’s decision to charge $3.50 per page for copies of official records.

California Public Records Research, Inc. v. County of Alameda, 27 Cal.App.5th 800 (2019).

NOTE:

This case demonstrates that California counties have broad discretion to set fees for copying records. LCW attorneys can help public agencies ensure that any proposed fee increases are appropriate.

Congratulations to Geoffrey Sheldon, Alex Wong
and David Urban on their victory in a California
Supreme Court case!

“The importance of a fair trial to a criminal defendant is paramount to our justice system, and this reinforces that.”

- Geoffrey Sheldon

California Supreme Court decided unanimously that the Los Angeles County Sheriff’s Department and other law enforcement agencies may alert prosecutors that a deputy who is slated to testify in a criminal case has a history of misconduct. News of this decision made numerous publications in California and around the country – and Geoffrey Sheldon was interviewed to provide his input!
